Q: How to get a list of country names from a script? I have a script in node.js which exports some data from Firebase and then logs to the Firebase console. I am now trying to get the country name which can then be passed on to the console and logged there. A snippet of my code is shown below: `var ref = new Firebase(""); var locations = [] ref.on('child_added', function(snapshot) { var country = snapshot.val().Country locations.push(country) console.log(country) })` I have researched a number of ways in which this can be achieved, without success. The problem appears to be that snapshots are not declared as "async" when the function is called. In my node version, there is a Promise pending with several of the functions listed here. My next thought was that I can use a while loop and keep polling for changes but that appears a highly inefficient way of doing things. Is there a better method of achieving the same result? Thanks A: Here's a solution with `setInterval` and Promise (using `async/await`, so you will need Node 8 or higher): `var ref = new Firebase(""); var locations = [] ref.on('child_added', function(snapshot) { var country = snapshot.val().Country locations.push(country) /* If you want to call a function when new item in the list is found: snapshot.forEach(function(country) { doSomething(country) }); */ }); setInterval(() => { Promise.all(locations.map(country => doSomething(country))).then(() => { console.log("All done!") return; }) }, 2000) function doSomething(country) { console.log(country) }` You could also wrap in a function for a very clear method (no need to Microbial production of L-2,3-diaminopropionic acid using ammonium acetate with a feedback control of glutamate dehydrogenase. In this study, L-2,3-diaminopropionic acid (DAP) production was investigated through fermentation using recombinant Escherichia coli strain with feedback control of glutamate dehydrogenase (GDH). The L-lysine-producing microorganism was grown in a 5-L bioreactor in a fermentation medium containing ammonium acetate and glucose. The maximum DAP titer was 527 mg/L when the GDH was regulated with the NH₄⁺-dependent GDH expression vector. The GDH expression was controlled only by NH₄⁺ using a medium with 50 mM NH₄⁺-N, without glucose. L-lysine was added as the inducer as an internal standard, and the proposed method was validated using HPLC analysis. Q: How to upload JAR file? I have a project that I have converted to a JAR file. In my computer I get this error: "Cannot find D:\demos\i4ds\jenkins\ant\build.xml in any of the root directories" the problem is that I am trying to upload the project to github but I have a problem uploading the JAR file. I tried to do it in two ways: 1) In the command line without using any software I tried to upload the JAR file but I get the same error as the computer and I can't find the JAR file. 2) After some time my friend help me and he gave me a zip file in which was the JAR file and now I am trying to upload it to github but when I am trying to do it I get another error: "Sorry, that page does not exist" I tried to do what was explained in the website where I am uploading the project to github and it said: "Add the JAR file to the project. For projects on GitHub, make sure that the file is located under: This URL goes into the HTML page when a person is
