I have a Flask application using Microsoft Access as the database in Visual Studio 2017. The project was created with Python 3.5.1 and SQLAlchemy. I am wondering how to open and connect to the database when the application is launched. The documentation is unfortunately not very helpful regarding that: A: It's always better to have real tutorials for things that are not well documented. In this example, you are using SQLAlchemy but this is good, too. A first tutorial can be found here. Then, you have to execute the SQLAlchemy installation on your machine. Install the MS Access database engine and the MS Access database in your machine, then execute the following lines of code: engine = create_engine("mssql+pymssql://user:password@localhost:1433/database_name") Session = sessionmaker(bind=engine) Session.configure(bind=engine) There are more details in this GitHub issue. You'll find different examples in the relevant section of the project page. (I can be wrong, so please correct me if I am) If there is a problem, it will be solved immediately with an error. S.S.D.
