Huangyan oil therapy (HOT) alleviates osteoporotic bone defect in ovariectomized mice. Osteoporosis is a major bone disease worldwide and, in addition to estrogen deficiency, also results from increased production of osteoclast-promoting factors, such as receptor activator of nuclear factor- κ B ligand (RANKL). Ovariectomy (OVX) has been frequently used to establish animal models with osteoporosis. An herbal mixture, Huangyan Oil Therapy (HOT), has been used to ameliorate bone diseases, such as osteoporosis in China for thousands of years. The present study examined the effects of HOTA on osteoporotic bone in OVX mice. Mice were OVX and subsequently treated with HOTA or estradiol (E2). Bone mineral density (BMD) and femur bone histology was assessed. Serum levels of calcium, phosphorus and alkaline phosphatase (ALP) were also determined. In the femur, dynamic histomorphometry, tartrate-resistant acid phosphatase (TRAP) staining, and real-time polymerase chain reaction for RANK

MSI N61-SLI Maximus 2 Mini

Review We have seen dozens of MSI motherboards in the last few years, but the MSI N61-SLI Maximus 2

Mini was a beast of a CPU VRM.

Being a beast of a VRM is nothing new, but the Maximus 2 Mini didn't just have the VRM to match it's impressive specifications, but it also
