My name is Leo and I am an electronics hobbyist and tech blogger. Here you can learn about all the latest apps, games, hardware and so much more! Hope you enjoy! President Trump on Thursday said he would put the brakes on the federal review of three labor rule proposals until the next administration, telling Hispanic journalists that the issue had "been going on for a long time." Speaking at the White House,

Mr. Trump said that while he would consult with Labor Secretary Alexander Acosta to determine if he's "going to withdraw the complaint." The complaint was filed by a small number of business owners who are worried that the rules will lead to increased competition and potentially lower wages for workers.

"We have a lot of really great companies in this country that have been taken advantage of for many years," Mr. Trump said, in comments that echoed other comments he made earlier this week. He reiterated that other countries have similar rules and that the U.S. should focus on enacting the business-friendly changes to immigration
