Last you say that you did a complete driver update: Do you mean all drivers? Yes, I still need to update them..Q: How to deserialize an XmlElement from a UTF-8 string I have a piece of code that serializes an XElement to a UTF-8 string like this: XmlSerializer ser = new XmlSerializer(theType); string utf8String = ser.Serialize(document); When I deserialize the string, it fails because the ser.Serialize method serializes using UTF-8 as the charset, and the string is UTF-8 encoded. I need to know the charset in order to deserialize the UTF-8 string. A: You're never going to do this with plain old String. The encoding is embedded in the data itself. With something like a byte[] that's easy to fix: string utf8String = Encoding.UTF8.GetString(Encoding.UTF8.GetBytes(ser.Serialize(document))); But a string is more complex because it contains a byte order mark and is usually UTF-16 encoded (but could be UTF-8). You need to remove the byte order mark from the string first (using a custom method borrowed from here)
