Viewing the facts and all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the Commonwealth as the verdict winner, the evidence established that Appellant had previously provided heroin and cocaine to ten informants that he was supplying. The Commonwealth set forth evidence that Appellant supplied in excess of 2,100 grams of heroin and at least 1,360 grams of cocaine during the investigation period, between September 2013 and August 2014. Thus, the Commonwealth proved that Appellant was in possession of over 2,000 grams of heroin and more than 1,300 grams of cocaine on the date of his arrest. Additionally, the record reveals that the police searched the premises where Appellant was arrested and found approximately 60 vials of heroin and four vials of cocaine that were stored in a box that Appellant admitted belonged to him. The record also revealed that Appellant had approximately $1,500 and $3,000 in his pockets at the time of his arrest. Appellant had a consistent history of supplying large quantities of heroin
