Debuting in the wake of the retirement of the current head of one of the Scottish climbing nations, Ian Weston, 2016 and 2017 Citywide Masters had the attention of a new generation. There had already been three strong Scottish wins in UK Nationals and this was a chance to put it all out on the board. Debuting in 2012, Euan Lawson had also claimed the title in 2013, but it was under the name of 'Newcastle'. This was the third time in the previous five years that the championship had been held in the home city, but 2016
