I am a little new to templates and I need some help with the standard template library template T getter(int i){ return T(); } template T setter(int i){ return T(); } int main() { using namespace std; getter(5); } This was the result that I got. error: no matching function for call to 'getter(int&)' getter(5); ^ Can't someone please explain what's happening? Thanks in advance A: You have defined a template function getter, and you are trying to call it with T as a non-type template parameter, for example with T = int. The compiler gives you the error error: no matching function for call to 'getter(int&)' because it is not possible to call a function like getter with a non-type template parameter. If you want to use getter as a function that returns either of the two generic functions, you can define both e79caf774b
