Two galectins from the sea star Asterias rubens were purified and characterized. An 85-kDa monomeric galectin was isolated, in agreement with previously reported theoretical molecular mass. This galectin was different from another one purified from the same sea star (Böhmer, B., and Rüegg, H.H. (1993) Biol. Chem. 374, 677-684) which is known to be a 350-kDa dimer. Kinetic studies of the 65-kDa monomeric galectin by gel-permeation high performance liquid chromatography and gel-filtration chromatography revealed that it is more stable than the 350-kDa dimer. The analysis of the oligosaccharide content of the two galectins by reverse-phase fast protein liquid chromatography showed that the 85-kDa galectin had a higher

===== . A: This is just a guess based on this part of the output: more /etc/lsb-release | grep DISTRIB_DESCRIPTION DISTRIB_DESCRIPTION="Ubuntu Studio 19.10" According to the man page for apt: The priority_version keyword introduced in version 1.1 can be used to select a version without regards to the actual version number. In this example, choosing "version=1.1.1" selects version 1.1.1 rather than version 1.1.2, and version 1.2.1, and so on. So, you can replace any of the entries (taken from the output above) with version=1.2.1, and the apt command should work. Update: It appears that you cannot overwrite specific versions of package. If the full version number is non-negative, this option overrides the priority_version option, but if the full version number is negative, this option simply makes the first value (priority_version) more important. In other words, 1.2.1 in priority_version overrides version=1.2.1. Effects of natriuretic
