The woman at the Tacos la Guera order window recommends the asada, and she is absolutely right to do so: It is delicious, faultless. You should get the lengua, too. Its a soft and sweaty pile of joy, and thats not a euphemism, we swear. But please, do not leave that food truck without at least one chicharron taco ($2). Crispy fried cracklins these are not. Instead, strips of skin-on pork belly are stewed until soft in a vivid salsa verde that pops with a feisty kick of jalapeo. They are just fatty enough to remind you of baconand just as addictive. Pull up to Tacos la Guera any night of the week and take note of the fandom: whole families and groups of friends sitting in their vehicles, happily plowing through paper plates piled with tacos.
