i did not include the link to windows media creation tool on the windows 7 iso page because there was no need to use it for installing windows 7. you can make a bootable windows 7 usb drive with windows 7 iso and it does not need the media creation tool. microsoft has provided a windows 10 iso download page on its official website. you can choose between 32 and 64 bit version of windows 10. each version is available in dvd and usb format. i recommend the dvd because it is more convenient to install windows 10 using a dvd, and it is the only one that has the media creation tool. there are a lot of websites offering windows 10 iso download. you can use these websites to download a windows 10 iso file and create a bootable usb flash drive to install windows 10. you can use this usb to install windows 10 on your device of choice, including computer and mobile devices. i was looking for a way to make a windows 10 bootable usb drive, and there was no option on the windows 7 page. it was frustrating. i was searching for hours for a method to create a windows 10 bootable usb drive using windows 7 iso, and i finally found it. i have tested it and it works fine. the only catch is that you need to use a windows 7 dvd. i am using windows 10 on my laptop but i am unable to boot from usb. i can boot from usb when i use the dvd but my laptop does not have a dvd drive. that is the reason why i used the dvd to make a bootable usb. i am sure it works on most computers, and in case it does not, you can use the media creation tool to make a bootable usb drive. 5ec8ef588b
