This 64-bit version also includes a new 64-bit DLL that was added to the SURFCAM program. If you have a SURFCAM installed on a computer that is running the new SURFCAM 2018 64-bit release, you will be able to use a 64-bit user interface for SURFCAM processing. This 64-bit version is free to download. It also brings a 64-bit BLOB\OBJ format for compression. This allows SURFCAM users to store extremely large file sizes for use with common mobile phone applications, mobile device applications, and other SURFCAM users. This 64-bit release will also feature a new hierarchical XRND file management system that allows SURFCAM users to quickly navigate through several levels of folders and files. This new interface also offers a new user interface (UI) that provides an intuitive and more productive tool than the prior release. The new UI is also more modern, featuring state-of-the-art look-and-feel, an exciting new look, and a new navigation system. One of the most exciting new features in SURFCAM 2018 x64 is the extended, intuitive and state-of-the-art SURFCAM Part Modeler. This powerful tool will allow SURFCAM users to create and manipulate solid models. In the prior release, users could create and modify solid models using tools like primitive tools, extruding, chamfering, scribing, milling, reaming, burring, gluing and more. Now, SURFCAM Part Modeler offers several more tool types. It can use complex and advanced tools, similar to those in the new SURFCAM 2.2L program. The new SURFCAM 2018 software will also allow SURFCAM users to create high-quality 3D solid models quickly and easily. With SURFCAM Part Modeler, users can create accurate, beautiful solid models in a variety of ways. They can also automate the entire process. The software allows users to interactively model geometric parts and create hundreds of such parts at once. This tool will allow SURFCAM users to create and modify parts with surface finishing tools, as well as hollow and fill-in tools. An improved workflow system will allow users to create parts more efficiently and easily.
