Q: Logstash forward messages from one input to another based on message prefix In my logstash config file I have three different inputs and would like to forward messages from input A (first one) to input B (second one) based on the prefix of the messages. For example, I want to drop messages with the prefix "ERROR" and send those to an error-output, but I want to keep messages with the prefix "INFO" in input A. I already tried to use conditional output, but it seems that the parser has no control over the message which gets dropped from the first input to the second. input { stdin { } } output { stdout { } } filter { if [message] =~ /^INFO/ { mutate { } } else { drop { } } } A: You can use a filter to rename 2edc1e01e8

Description Information is the most valuable thing since long past times. Nowadays information is mainly digitized so it can be easily snagged by hackers or ill-intended people. More than a decade ago, your files were safe on your system as the internet connection was not a standard good for everyone. Today, being plugged in 24/7 you would need specialized tools for securing your files. Password encryption is one of the preferred solutions for most of us and Encrypt Everything NKM is a piece of software that can help you with that. Simple and easy-to-use UI After the brief installation process, the UI pops up, and you can start the encryption right away. At first, you can only choose from the two options provided; Encrypt and Decrypt. After you click on encrypt, two more files are going to be listed, filed for the output name and the location selector. The interface has no toolbars or other hidden settings that can access other functions. Pick a password and secure your files. The encryption process is straightforward and won't put you in difficulty as you progress through. After the name and files destinations were selected, you will be prompted the password pane. Write down the password twice and wait for the app to complete the process. After a couple of seconds, the encryption is over. After a file is encrypted, it becomes inaccessible and unresponsive. To decrypt the file, open the app again, select "Decrypt" and use the same password you've locked it for regaining access. The decrypting process is the same as the encryption, so no other issues are going to pop up.

Handy and lightweight tool In conclusion, Encrypt Everything NKM is a smart app that provides a secure way to protect your sensitive information and files. Use the two processes to lock and unlock your data only by using a password. Keep in mind the password as there are no "I forgot my password" recovery ways. Simple and easy-to-use UI After the brief installation process, the UI pops up, and you can start the encryption right away. At first, you can only choose from the two options provided; Encrypt and Decrypt. After you click on encrypt, two more files are going to be listed, filed for the output name and the
