Unlike the classical review method, this process is more like a game. Publish the review document, generate an end-result screen capture, and attempt to alter your review in response from your colleagues while preserving the integrity of the document. Hard drive space is a very important consideration when choosing software. If your hard drive is small, you will find yourself going through many gigabytes of disk space or even hard drives to store your tarballs, jpegs, photos, graphic files, video files, and other resources. On the other hand, if it has a very fast hard drive it will perform far more quickly and allow you the possibility to have more fly-by-night drag and drop effects. Because of the fast hard drive, it may function as a more expensive and complex tool compared to the standard free program. Really think about the size of any hard drive you may be planning to use once you have a clear idea of what content you plan to use. It is a good idea to choose a program that best fits your needs in terms of the amount of files you plan to store and which ones you plan to store on the whole disk.
