Romney's story is different than many of the other candidates in that he can argue he never really ran. But I think that distinction does him no favors. Republicans should be asking if a candidate has the experience to handle crisis, and if he or she has a chance to build consensus and advance the party's agenda. Questions like that are fair game, and the public should be able to ask them. However, we've seen during the presidential cycle questions and criticisms about whether candidates can adequately handle the presidency.
